Obama proves no dream is too high

DENVER—BARACK OBAMA CAST his presidential nomination as proof that no dream is too high, winning a historic moment for himself and the United States before setting out on a difficult struggle to break another barrier by becoming the first black US president.

Obama's success in obtaining the Democratic nomination was indeed a remarkable achievement, reached despite the misgivings of some American voters uncomfortable with electing the son of an African immigrant—not "the typical pedigree," as he put it.

He used his acceptance speech at the Democratic National Convention to put to ally those concerns, to show Americans that he is one of them—one born of wealth or privilege, his gains made of hard work and sacrifice.

"This moment—this election—is our chance to leap, to the 21st Century," he said.

No case, Solgen argues, but SC justices warn RP can be sued in int'l court

THE GOVERNMENT WAS HARD-PRESSED TO DEFEND ITS position that a provisional agreement on ancestral domain with the secessionist Moro Islamic Liberation Front had no binding effect so it had no case to answer before the Supreme Court.

During arguments on the second day of hearings on the petitions against the proposed nonattachment of agreements on ancestral domains (MOA), Solicitor General Agnes Devasa was forced to defend the government's position on the lack of various high court justices warned of the dangers in international law that the government has imposed the Philippines and the risk of dismantling the national territory because of the MOA.

At least two magistrates pointed out that by initiating the MOA, the government has invited itself to sue and lose, or it would be the remaining order that the high court issued against it is lifted.

Devasa said the high court should dismiss the petitions against the MOA, arguing that there was no more case to decide as the agreement would "not be signed in its present form or in any other form" and that it had been "terminated."

She initially told the high court that the government's position stated had no authority to sign the MOA so that their initiating it would have no binding effect. But she later modified that stance, explaining that what she meant was that the government had no authority to sign a final peace agreement.

Devasa argued that the government would not have been bound by the MOA as the document only retained consensus points for consultation, and these points would have had

'Smother' C. Mindanao with troops, says Roxas

By Nicko Olzon and Inquirer Mindanao

OPPOSITION LEADER MANUEL "MAY" ROXAS has urged the military to "smother" violence-free Central Mindanao with troops and set up security zones to protect villages before recruiting peace talks with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

The Liberal Party leader made the call during a dinner with Inquirer editors and reporters on Thursday night, as Defense Secretary Gilberto Teodoro Jr. rejected calls for an all-out war against the rebels, warning a full-scale offensive could provoke "a sub game war which we do not want."

Roxas said there was a danger that violence in the affected provinces could escalate, noting that even the Ilaga—a Christian vigilante group—had threatened to retaliate against the rebels for pillaged villages in North Cotabato and Lanao del Norte earlier this month.

"The AFP must monitor the arms with government troops. If there are going to be vigilantes, in the end, the Palace P230-B infra fund 'in aid of people, not election'

By Michael Lim Utac

THE P230 BILLION THAT MALACANANG wants to spend for infrastructure next year is not an election "bribe" for administrative efforts running for office in the 2010 general elections.

"This is in aid of the people, not of elections. It is for development, and not for the 2010 polls," said Budget Secretary Roldando Mandaya Jr.

Malacanang has submitted to Congress a P241.5-billion proposed budget for 2009, out of which it proposes to spend P230 billion in infrastructure and public works projects, including roads, bridges, airports, railways, school buildings and waterworks systems. (See related story on Page A18.)

By comparison, the government's infrastructure funds for 2008 amounted to P122.2 billion.

Of the P230 billion proposed infrastructure spending for 2009, P147.3 billion will be spent by the national government, P12.1 billion by government-owned and -controlled corporations and P70.6 billion by local governments.

Not included in the tally are ongoing and future projects that are being funded or will be funded through various joint venture schemes with the private sector, Andaya said.

CALAMBA CITY—THE HUMAN RIGHTS GROUP Kasaputan hailed the release of five men accused of being communist guerrillas after the court's dismissal of the "trumped-up rebellion case" filed against them.

"This is a victory for human rights," said Ruff Geronimo, Kasaputan public information officer.

After the release, the five men, including Ruff Geronimo, Michael Manzano, and other names, collectively known as the "Tagaytay 5," were released from prison at about 2:15 p.m. on Monday after the Regional Trial Court of Tagaytay City granted the habeas corpus writ.

The five were arrested on charges of being communist guerrillas. "The arrest of the Tagaytay 5 is a violation of our constitution that those who work for a better society must not be considered as traitors," Geronimo said.

He said his group welcomed Tagaytay 5 to their movement and urged them to continue their struggle against the military and other government forces.

"Human rights violations continue to be committed under this regime and it is justified for us to stand up and resist," Geronimo said.

Extra funds for Defense eyed

By Herman Ilarduya

BUDGET SECRETARY ROLANDO ANDAYA JR. has asked Congress to realign some of the allocations in the proposed P1.415-trillion national budget for 2009 to increase the share of the Department of Defense.

Andaya, who chaired the House budget committee when the war in Iraq was originally expected to last for more than a decade, said the need for more defense funding is the extent of the ongoing

"This is a reasonable request. We've actually lost 50 percent of our air transport capability. I heard we only have two C-130s," he said.

Andaya said when the budget proposal was being put together, the incentives in Malacanang had not yet happened.

But since then the MILF has begun attacking civilian targets in three Mindanao provinces after the aborted signing of a memorandum of agreement on accommodation that would have created a separate Bangsamoro state.

Under the expenditure program proposed for 2009, the defense department has been offered P4.5 billion, the fourth highest after education (P10.5 billion), public works and highways (P12 billion), and local government (P8.1 billion).

Andaya did not say how much more would be needed in the wake of the AR 1500's loss of aircraft and the military operations in Mindanao, but said "we would welcome any realignment or amendment made by Congress on this issue."

Andaya, who introduced the budget proposal to the House last Wednesday, said the budget department has been prioritizing the proposed budget for some time already.

Quinta Rep. Raula Ota, the chair of the House appropriations committee, said the House would start budget hearings on Sept. 3. He expects the chamber to pass the budget before the House goes on October break.

"We did it last year. There's no reason we cannot do it again," Ota said.

Speaker Prospero Nograles said the House would conduct a performance audit of early retirement departments, and the findings would be used in determining the agency allocations for 2009.

Putin says US created Georgia conflict

MOSCOW—RUSSIAN PRIME MINISTER Vladimir Putin accused Washington on Thursday of manufacturing the Georgia conflict as tensions rose with the United States threatening to scrap a nuclear deal in protest at Moscow's actions.

Russia issued an anti-terrorist warning in South Ossetia and Abkhazia as separate states. Putin said the European Union could impose sanctions on Russia.

The missile test in northern Russia came barely a week after the United States completed an accord with Poland on testing an anti-missile shield in central Europe and on Russia's eastern border.

"The fact is that 100,000 missiles were indeed in the area in case they started the facilities. It should be admitted that they would have only following days before their launch," Putin said in an interview with CNN.

He said he suspected that "someone in the US specially created this conflict" to "create an advantage" for a 2008 presidential campaign.

The remarks drew a swift response from the White House which described them as "patently false."

Washington said it was considering scrapping a US-Russia civilian nuclear cooperation pact in response to Moscow's actions.

PUTIN

"If my guess is right, there will be no explosion that someone in the US specially created this conflict to worsen the situation and create an advantage in the presidential campaign for the year of president of the United States," he said.

The light test in the first 4 years in the United States pro-Democratic Barack Obama against Republican John McCain, who has been hostile to his public response to the Georgia conflict.

A White House spokesman said "Russia claimed first and foremost the priority lies, but it is not a simple fact, but a complex one."

who said they believed this to be true and giving him really bad advice."

After leaving Washington to go through with a recent accord allowing US and Russian troops to move into Georgia in the nuclear crisis, the spokesman said "I don't think there's anything in an accord yet, but I know that that is under discussion."

The standoff with the first US president since President Dmitry Medvedev's announcement that Russia recognized South Ossetia and another rebel region, Abkhazia, as independent states.

Georgia's parliament said for the government is not diplomatic ties with Moscow over Russia's "unjustified" of "Georgia's sovereignty" in a resolution adopted unanimously in Tbilisi.

Later on Thursday, Georgia called for an international investigation into the events that led to its conflict with Russia and allegations of widespread human rights abuses.

Georgia's President Mikheil Saakashvili said in an interview with the BBC, he was "open" to negotiate with Russia. AFP

Faiths clash, displacing thousands in East India

NEW DELHI—AT LEAST 3,000 people, most of them Christians, were killed in the violence that erupted after days of Christian versus Hindu violence in eastern India, government officials said.

The government said more people were also living in the area without any shelter or security because of the violence, which erupted in violence after a Hindu temple was killed on Saturday. At least 30 people, most of them Christians, have been killed since.

Christians, a community leader, said at least 1,000 homes of Christians have been set on fire since Monday, resulting more than 3,000 people homeless. Many of those living in the jungle were without food or water, said the Rev. Dinkar Chakrabarti, a priest at the Roman Catholic church in Mumbai, a town in Orissa State. Dinkar said about 10 places of worship, including small churches and prayer halls, had been burned down. Local officials said the figure was about 20.

The violence has occurred in Kandhamal, a district in Orissa State that has a history of communal and ethnic clashes. AFP

Sullivan: 'Lucky' Phelps must bring A-game vs 'us sprint boys'

STANLEY, BRITAIN—MEMORABLE for his coach helped American Michael Phelps win eight gold medals at the Beijing Olympics, world record-holding Australian swimmer Ian Thorpe said Friday.

Phelps, who broke the world 100-meter freestyle record in the semifinals at Beijing but finished second in the final, said Phelps was able to break Thorpe's record of seven golds at one Olympic through good fortune and some small errors by rivals.

"There was an element of luck," Sullivan said.

Phelps came from behind to beat Serbia's Milorad Cacic by 0.03 seconds in the 100-meter butterfly final and recorded his outstanding swim by outswimming Ian Thorpe to take gold in the 400-meter freestyle relay.

"You finished five things some days in London and some would say Cacic's finish was—I was at that point 50.5M whatever you take another stroke or you take eight," Sullivan said.

"You are Phelps took another stroke, for Cacic took a glide and obviously Phelps' stroke was coming over as a better pace."

"He (Phelps) made the right decision and the idea guy made the wrong decision."

WB, RP draw up rules to speed up project implementation

By Doris C. Durano and Michele Y. Rana

ECONOMIC PLANNING Secretary Ralph Recto wants full disbursement of official development assistance (ODA) granted and programmed for this year as the government wanted to correct the historic spending that chipped down growth in the last half.

Disbursement of programmed ODA reached 86 percent last year and Recto wants to 2006.

Recto said government agencies should speed up spending in the remainder of the year to help the economy grow by at least 5.5 percent this year.

Recto said that the balance growth target has become a tough challenge following a sharp decline in the first half, when GDP grew by only 4.6 percent. In the same period last year, the economy grew 7.6 percent.

The slowdown in 2006 growth was blamed largely on high inflation, which forced consumers to tighten spending on consumption, and poor Expect more free time. Here's how.

Time for yourself and for your family has never been more precious. While nothing can be perfectly planned to the last minute, it's still possible to set aside time for both.

Reasons for tips on how to prioritize, maximize work-life balance and discover precious free time hiding in the corners of every day.

SCHEDULE FOR SUCCESS.

Keeping a schedule is an effective tool to coordinate the information in your head. A well-planned day prevents us from running out of time and leaves us ahead of the daily race for success.

PRIORITIZE YOUR DAY.

A to-do list scribbled in your notebook or on a sticky note can be good enough to remind you of what you have to accomplish for the day. Don't forget to indicate which activities are truly priorities that start with these.

PLAN FOR THE MONTH.

For the busybody, with meetings, appointments and errands scattered all throughout the month, keep a detailed planner. Use the calendar program on your mobile phone to give you a nudge to your schedule whenever you are. A good bonus: people you work with will appreciate how you value and respect their time by being prompt with submissions or meetings.

STRIKE A WORK-LIFE BALANCE.

Don't forget to include non-work related activities in your schedule. You can keep separate schedules for work, fitness and family but make sure they don't overlap, otherwise you may have to choose between Mom's birthday party and an important client's dinner invitation.

IDENTIFY YOUR TIME WASTERS.

What eats up most of your time? Do you spend your lunch hour trawling up in the bank or in the Bapped Center? Or maybe you are spending yourself too thin.

multi-tasking to the extreme and saying yes to everyone's requests. Are these things essential to your daily, weekly or monthly goals or do they merely keep you from doing what's most important?

NO-THINK YOUR ROUTINE.

We've been so used to doing things in a particular, usually old-fashioned way that when there's a simpler and faster way to do them, it may take you some time to learn and get used to a new method you'll save more time from these changes than you extra time for yourself.

DISCOVER ALTERNATIVES.

Take advantage of new parts in that help you reach your goals without effort. Instead of lining up for a bank transaction, ask your bank if they offer online, phone or mobile banking. Instead of doing everything yourself, learn to delegate your tasks and learn to say no to requests, especially when your schedule is already filled up with urgent concerns.

Week-long observance hopes to shed light on epilepsy

By Charles E. Rubin

EPILEPSY WAS A mysterious illness and even the World Health Organization is doubtful if there are any other medical conditions as universally misunderstood, due to the combination of medical ignorance, low profile and lack of resources.

The National Epilepsy Awareness Week—which will be celebrated from Sept. 1 to 7—aims to change this by raising awareness of epilepsy throughout the country.

An estimated 750,000 Filipinos have epilepsy and sadly, many people around them still believe that when they hear a person having a seizure, they should restrain the person or put them in a body of water. When a person has a seizure, there is no harm in letting them lie down and breathe.

For more information, visit www.epilepsy.org.ph

Far more common
“While this neurological condition affects up to 1 in 20 percent of the population, epilepsy and epileptic seizures are far more common than people realize,” said Dr. Gerardo Leganes, neurologist professor at the University of the Philippines College of Medicine.

He explained that not all at risk of developing epilepsy become seizure-free cases without any obvious cause. In fact, it is more likely to be diagnosed in children and young adults, it is far more common than people realize.

ABSTRACT (left) and neurologist Gerardo Leganes believe there must be close rapport between doctor and patient to effectively manage epilepsy and epileptic seizure.

Overactivity

“Epilepsy is a condition where the brain is overactive, resulting in seizures, which can be triggered by a variety of factors, such as a head injury, infection, or a genetic predisposition,” he said.

Leganes noted one of his patients, a 45-year-old man, who experienced his first seizure at the age of 10. “He had no obvious cause for his seizure,” he said.

Leganes said that there is a close rapport between doctor and patient to effectively manage epilepsy and epileptic seizure. “It is important for the doctor to understand the patient’s condition and to provide the best possible treatment,” he said.

“This is why a doctor’s treatment should be based on the patient’s condition and the best possible treatment,” he said.

to take medication therapy with the appropriate drug, such as carbamazepine (Tegretol), as anti-seizure medication.

“I would advise that the most common therapy is medication. I have seen many cases where I don’t have seizure for two years, Leganes said. I might be able to stop taking the medication,” he said.

Up to 75 percent of people with epilepsy ultimately become seizure-free with medication, and many of them will be able to stop taking medication.

Indeed, one of the most surprising aspects about epilepsy is that it is not as often as people think.

Drugs that control control

“There are medications that can control epileptic seizures, but to ensure this, the doctor must be able to prescribe the right drug,” he said.

Online support group gives comfort to psoriasis patients

By Tina Samonte

TO BE DIAGNOSED WITH psoriasis may be devastating for some. But when online support group for psoriasis patients is in their corner and support from a group that could really sympathize with their condition.

And who else could do a better job than those who share the same condition?

On Aug. 10, 2005, Joel de Guzman, a psoriasis patient himself, had just put up an online support group called Psoriasis Philippines (Psorip) for people who suffer from psoriasis.

“I don’t really give comfort to other people, but I do share the pain about the disease. In this way, the public may not be too busy in discriminating against people with psoriasis,” he said.

“We try to reach out to everyone, even to those people who don’t have access to the Internet. Those who do not have access to the Internet can still reach out to us through email or by phone,” he said.

Currently, Psorip is the only Philippine organization recognized by the International Federation of Psoriasis Associations.

It is a nonprofit organization that makes up of people with psoriasis from around the world.

THE PALS! program gives you a chance to meet some of the world’s most active children who will develop a healthy and positive attitude.

Sex education starts at home

By Rebecca S. Sigman, MD, FPMG, FAIS, FPMPC Contributor

LET US BE CLEAR THAT SINCE the day your kids are born, you are already teaching them messages about their sexuality. You dress them in ways to signal they are a girl and boy if they are a boy.

Feeding, holding and comforting, kissing and hugging, and talking about their bodies to explore emotions, positive physical sensations associated with being loved. The simple type of physical intimacy and emotional connection between parent and infant are the early foundation of healthy sexual development in a physical and emotional way that develops from day one of life.

The way you touch and hold, soothe, comfort and love them lays down the foundation for a healthy sexual development and positive physical connection which makes them feel they are loved by you. The longer you give—the quality exposure you receive from day one of life will determine whether your child will develop a healthy and positive sexual attitude.

Through your words, as well as your behavior, your verbal and nonverbal responses and reactions show your child your values and attitudes about sexuality.

Getting to know the body

Children need to be taught the right to be their body parts. A penis is the male sex organ and the vagina is the female sex organ. When you give messages about the sexual body parts, you are conveying the message that there is something wrong or uncomfortable or embarrassing about them. The children therefore are afraid to show it like their body parts are something to be ashamed of.

Boys and girls naturally touch their bodies during diaper changes or when they have frequent erections. They are not aware of how they feel about their bodies and they are not aware of how they feel about their bodies.

Sexual expressions and body language are what give your child’s first lessons in sexuality. If you show discomfort with sexual expressions or embarrassment, you teach your child that this is something about his or her body that is shameful. When in doubt, it should be a neutral go-ahead.

If your child comes home telling his male organs were used to be used for other things like “kiss” or “love,” you can say, “Some people use it to be used for other things like ‘kiss’ or ‘love,’ but it is not for other things like ‘kiss’ or ‘love.’”

Children may use to be used for other things like “kiss” or “love,” but it is not for other things like “kiss” or “love.”

Dr. Rebecca S. Sigman, an educator in sexual health education, is a former reproductive organ, birth control and abortion clinic and is currently a reproductive organ, birth control and abortion clinic.

US firm takes on RP personal care market

By Ronald R. Domingo

MANILA—LIFESIDE FOOD SUPPLEMENT Inc. (LFS) has secured a place to begin operations in the Philippines, making its country its 14th international marketplace.

The Irish-based firm develops and markets health-related products, and its weight management product is now available in the Philippines and other countries.

Chief executive officer John O'Connell said the company is looking for a local partner to help it enter the market.

O'Connell said the company is looking for a local partner to help it enter the market. The company is looking for a local partner to help it enter the market.

"We believe this market will be another strong part of our growing international portfolio," O'Connell said.

O'Connell said the company is looking for a local partner to help it enter the market.

In its 2007 annual report, LFS said that its growth strategy was to enter new markets, achieve rapid expansion, and develop a strong market share.

"We believe this significant growth is a testament to the quality of our products and the demand for our services," O'Connell said.

By Don C. Sison

THE COUNTRY'S BROAD MONEY supply expanded at a faster rate in June compared with the previous month, partly due to the surge in remittances from overseas workers in June for the opening of the school year, central bank officials said.

Domestic liquidity in M2 grew by 3.1 percent year-on-year in June, from the 3.7 percent annual growth in May, due to the foreign exchange growth in net foreign assets, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas reported yesterday.

Net foreign assets that showed last month's increased income, as well as in other depositary institutions, jumped by 17.7 percent in June over a year ago. 5.1 percent reported that assets netted from net foreign assets through banks but at a slight high of 5.1 percent.

Gov't set to secure infra, agri projects, apart from mining

By Amy R. Rano

THE DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES has expanded the scope of its proposed economic zone into mining, but also to include not only mining, but also agriculture, infrastructure, and other projects.

Reported to be implemented by next month, the Investment Drive for the Philippines (IDP) was initially created by the government agency to attract foreign investment to the country.

In particular, the IDP will be used to attract investment in the mining, infrastructure, and other sectors.

Initially, the IDP would focus on sectors like the mining, infrastructure, and other sectors.

Opening of school year prompted 5.1% rise in domestic liquidity $1.5 billion in June—up by a hefty 31 percent over that of the previous year.

The BSP said that the increase in domestic liquidity was due to the growth in remittances from overseas workers in June for the opening of the school year, central bank officials said.

Net foreign assets that showed last month's increased income, as well as in other depositary institutions, jumped by 17.7 percent in June over a year ago. 5.1 percent reported that assets netted from net foreign assets through banks but at a slight high of 5.1 percent.

The IDP also reported a significant increase in the number of projects.

expansion in private credit, as net domestic assets posted a positive growth of 3.5 percent in June. This was a positive sign for the country's economic growth in 2007.

On the other hand, the "net other assets" account, which includes the BSP's special deposit account and other assets, showed a negative growth of 1.5 percent in June.

WITH 7,000 SQ M of premises, Colson Residences will have fully completed village park facilities as well as school and health center, an amphitheater, a playground and a multipurpose center.

PICK Manila, owned by the Ayala Land company, is located in Manila, with open spaces, retail centers, educational center, fitness center and sports field. The area also offers recreational facilities from Thailand, Japan and Spain.

Ayala property in Manila

'sacrifices' 7,000 sq m for green space

By Tessa K. Salazar

THE FIRST DEVELOPMENT of an Ayala Land company in Manila has set aside 7,000 square meters for open space and greenery.

This was decided by Don Alonso, Ayala Land president, during the May 27 launch of Colson Manila's lifestyle-oriented market called PICK Manila. He added that Manila has long been known of environmental concerns as a developer and has "sacrificed" a significant portion of land for this.

As a result, Colson Manila is considered a low-density development with the integration of different uses.

By integrating facilities integrated in every development, Colson Manila is composed of residential development, business process outsourcing services such as Executive building, communications and retail center with direct entry by Ayala Mall group.

Environmental conservation

"We do believe, my office says that environmental conservation is not just a part to support of environmental conservation," Alonso said.

According to him, it has been in Ayala's longer since the 1960s, the motto of the corporation, Bel-Air and Parque communities, to have almost fully greenery. He added that Ayala properties are provided enough green space to be considered along the road.

Alonso said a big focus in Ayala Land company practice is to have sustainable to help provide infrastructure to support of reducing traffic on the community especially in its commercial and shopping centers.

"Whenever you drive to any of our developments they are surrounded by green," Alonso said. Ayala developments are very much in line with the Philippine density levels, he said.

Reduce energy consumption

Don Alonso, vice president for Ayala Land projects and development, said the development has incorporated key elements of green buildings—energy lighting and natural ventilation—inspired by the Bel-Air and Parque communities.

Alonso said this concept aims to reduce energy consumption, which would benefit residents. He added that two energy consumption would mean low carbon dioxide emissions.

Colson Residences (Executive) project ranges from P15 to P12 million, while the Colson City (Executive) project cost at P14 million. Alonso said these developments are more sophisticated market to Manila.

Many projects in the corporation, and its parent of the land bank, have been completed.

First call center site in Manila

Colson Manila's BPO center is located in the biggest in Manila, and will be built mostly of Ayala Land communities. Ayala Land projects and development, Alonso said, will be the first call center site in Manila with an entry access to a road that connects retail and business facilities that will enhance the industry's booming, trade environment.

The shops at Colson will allow shopping, dining and leisure options. Alonso said the development is part of a series of new concepts of Ayala Land. It will feature a mix of classic Filipino centers and open spaces, local democracy, parks and recreation facilities such as a theater from Thailand, Japan and Spain.

It will have a wide range of corporate products such as health facilities, retail and retail, and the big impact of the development that will offer their products such as health, recreation, education and retail.

INCREASE in demand for services in Manila has led to the development of the Ayala Land company's new projects.

Cheerleaders are athletes in their own right

Text is unaltered by Ruth L. Watters

IF THE CHEERING COMPETITION IS A football game, it would be equivalent to the last two minutes with your team down and with the opponent's. There's no room for mistakes. Every single move is crucial, every second a chance to make a killer shot. A single blunder could blow the show as the grand prize.

It's true that the manner of downloading is to encourage the audience to participate in the game through, well, cheering. In fact, they are the substitutes during half-times of basketball games.

But these challenges are nothing to them. In fact, it takes them seconds of practice to perform pyramids, waves and tumbling passes for a five-minute performance. They risk no tearing injuries and the hoodoo of the fans from the opposing side.

Most of all, they have to make their jobs look easy. They have to show off their trading smarts, even with trained sailors at their elbows, as if they were the drivers for 20 years.

Next week, the cheerleaders are still in their second stage in the upcoming University Athletic Association of the Philippines cheering competition. Night teams will carry their school colors on their shoulders. The 71st season UAAAP cheering competition is on Sept. 7, 2 p.m., Avenue Cebuana, Brgy. 9 on.

DEATH RACE IS BACK A tough, competitive world that is by body alone should take to heart in it. It's literally the place where angels should fear to tread, for fear of losing their jobs, which wings might or might not. Children are angels of state, so they should give a chance to show business a really wide berth.

Statistically speaking, however, there are juvenile delinquents in play, not if adult judges perceive them, the results would be both.

Pete's abiding presence

By Doris Aronita

IT IS A YEAR AFTER MY HUSBAND Pete's demise (Aug. 9, 2007) from a 10-year battle that left his left arm and legs paralyzed. The stroke was exacerbated by diabetes, glaucoma, a hip fracture and a co-occurring heart with periodic lung and brain cancer. In typical tongue-in-cheek fashion, Pete claimed a "tomahawk" on his per afflictions.

It is 5 a.m., about the time I would take Pete's blood pressure and sugar count, grow into the toilet and administer his first daily pill for the day, to be spaced the next 12 hours. He would motivate the best by sending our teenage family to his parents, Al "Polar" Pio, and my former sister, Thelma of the Child Army. Then come the "heart episode" to be followed then his first need of the day. In his words, he did like a kid because everything he is asked to do.

It is a full-blown on my part, feeling this is when used to be Pete's ritual, heptagon and on the ground floor of our home. Everything else this time would finish that morning.

Act of sharing

I loved the act of sharing would define my personal beloved moment, where his dear soul had and the love would never like a moving person. Over the past year, I had realized that, by an act of surrender to God's will, no more that I could not always understand the events that would. His lovely Pete did know that he would live in the Coast Place in the Divine Family, it only to meet the daunting task of arranging for my loved ones.

But then we always disagreed. Here's my point, brother, for unspoken, halfway through this article that would be my widow's catharsis, the "soulful" account that Pete has led me to over the past year, whispering to me to let dream, playfully sending my love, or gently saying my words to me.

Pete must be taking this as a new way to make his presence felt, "from place" and "from place" and "from place" and the love was left behind. Everything that has happened the last year seems to be part of a Grand Design that he must have planned up—with mother, of course, from the Divine Family.

Greatest lesson

For Pete's greatest lesson is not about grief and healing but was embodied in the love and comfort of my children, Lark and Russell-Camron, Jose, Chago and Kiko, the Pato, Ben and Michelle Brothers, my grandchildren, extended family members and friends. They have lived the call that Pete left. He thought that he was going to the Avenue. There that we will have it enough for others the love on the pillow. More importantly, they have taught me "substitution" to life pain and emptiness to the highest love and thereby transform them into joy to the land.

The deceased pastor and psychologist Kenneth C. Haggis has also been a constant companion during journey through grief and healing via his books, the list of which follows, after reflecting and remembering. He has taught me that there is no prescribed period for grieving. And that the best and fastest way to heal is to help others.

SCOTT with daughter Chago, Jose, Pato, grandson Kiko, Pato and sister-cousin Ben. They prepare to bring the wine containing Pete's (Jose) when back to the altar.

hand, by being there for them, by just listening and making sure's presence felt, and by sharing together when needed.

Mentors

Aside from family, my most comforting help has been the work at hand for Pete's PRIDE Foundation, which my children and I set up at the testimony of my own life. Pato, Michelle Pato of Angeles. As Pete had expressed during his final moments, we have contributed a three-fold mission: the care of those patients, continuing broadcast media education and preservation of devotion to the Church.

We have an art exhibit about 20 think projects through an independent to the world. On the television and, we get some of the time and summer our doing, too to broadcast, in comparison.

with the Espinosa ng Brak-laners ng Pilipinas, Marikina Chapter and other members. He then also presented the stage work of Senator Peter's "Inday Pio" with Ricky Davao in the title role, with assistance from the Original Group of Comedian and the Pinoy Previews Group.

I thank friends who have given of their time and collective wisdom as PRIDE board members. By Andrew Aguirre, Freda, Bena, DLT Bena-Carabido, Pete's brother, Ed Ben, Ruffy Evangelista, Jose Mar, Chago and Maricar, Jose Pato, Maricar.

Making beautiful music with Tita King

By Hector U. Tena

WE JOIN MANY OTHERS IN REMEMBERING the death of National Artist Luceña King. We worked with her on theater projects at the GMA and admired her respect of others' input and her ability to work with the producers (Obispo by Hector Tena).

Our admiration for King turned into business when we started "Ang Pagpapaligay," a musical on GMA, for the National Historical Commission, with the second grand show of Philippine music composing and arranging the songs in the production (Obispo by Hector Tena).

Education

Behind the show were held at the Philippine Women's University, where King was on top of musical activities and education for many years. We looked forward to each rehearsal because we liked working with the "inimitable" Ms. King. Despite her advanced age and many health problems, King did just what we needed on the production team of composers, but she pushed the other artists in the show to over-achieve to be in the show.

She believed that her musical ability should be her energy and dynamism (both) for her many interests. Taking her cue from our classical roots, she looked out others to the show's musicians, singers and dancers—perhaps something you would like to see.

Dramatic effect

Since she was on her last legs, her musical director (King) had a dramatic effect on the show. She extended and delayed her coming up with their best work, and "Ang Pagpapaligay" became a great story from her early musical journey.

The King passed away at age 99, after having lived a full, creative life in the music and theater world. May all other artists derive inspiration from her life-lessons. And finally, share their lives, care to self-education, but to serving their art and to audience.

The lesson that Ms. King's life and career teach us greatly needs to be relevant today, where we have so-called artists who are, in fact, imitators of self-serving work.

Finding fulfillment

RECENTLY, WE MET A HIGH man who gifted himself and his family with expensive things. He, in turn, met other people with increasing lack of commitment and concern. Although he had many opportunities to help others, he was more concerned with his own welfare. He was content with the simplicity of maintaining an open mind, but it brought him stress.

In return, we spoke with his caretaker who was paid a monthly salary and had a program that did not reach out
